

Recording and Publication Release

I grant permission to InfoQ.com and Sun Microsystems the rights to film my presentation at the 2009 JVM Language Summit. InfoQ.com is contributing the filming services to help the sessions from the JVM Language Summit reach a wider audience.

I grant InfoQ.com and Sun the right, in perpetuity, to host an online version of my session with streaming video (and potentially non-downloadable synchronized slides) on InfoQ.com.

Should my session not be presented on InfoQ.com, or should the presentation cease to be publicly available on infoQ.com, I agree to allow it to be uploaded to another video publication site or sites of Sun's choosing, such as Google Video, Sun.com, Parleys, etc. If the video is published, it must be made available freely to anyone, without charge or membership requirement, and the speaker's name and affiliation must be identified clearly.

Optionally, I also agree to the following additional benefits for online viewers:

Initial here: _____ I allow a PDF of my slides to be downloadable

Initial here: _____ I allow an MP3 of the audio of my presentation to be downloadable

I agree to hold harmless the any parties connected to this presentation, including Sun and C4Media Inc. (producer of InfoQ.com) from any claims or concerns arising in connection with the availability of the online version of my session.
